

La Cornue 1908

CornuFé

CornuFé Heritage

When it comes to cuisine, the French have a tradition of unparalleled excellence dating back more than 500 years. And in 1908, a discerning gourmet by the name of Albert Dupuys dedicated himself to building an oven that embodied that remarkable culinary tradition. The result was the extraordinary La Cornue range. The world's first gas oven for the home, Dupuys' original invention was fabricated from the finest materials available, and its remarkable design allowed it to produce natural convection heat. Today, La Cornue is overseen by Albert's grandson, Xavier, who shares not only his grandfather's last name, but his absolute commitment to building ranges without equal.

CornuFé Distinction

With the new CornuFé line, La Cornue has put innovative new manufacturing technology to work to bring you the great tradition of French culinary excellence, without great expense. Boasting five burners and two ovens, the CornuFé provides La Cornue's uncompromising dedication to gastronomic perfection, for a more modest budget. And like every La Cornue, it is offered in a variety of colors, including Gloss Black, Antique White, Forest Green, Provence Blue and solid Stainless Steel. Plus, a choice of solid Satin Chrome trim or Satin Chrome trim with Polished Brass accents affords even more customization possibilities. Finally, unlike its predecessors, there is no extensive waiting period to receive your CornuFé. With the help of premier distributor Purcell Murray, these exquisite ranges have been made available on demand, at a retail location near you.
